

The Great Trail, in Ontario, meanders some 4,000 kilometers. Waterways cover approximately 40% of the distance of the trail system. The large waterway is situated on the shores of Lake Superior. It covers about 1,125 km. There is also a small waterway, north of Orillia, on Lake Couchiching. The trail utilises about 1,220 km of roadways ranging from dirt tracks, county roads, urban roads, and highways.

There are large sections for cyclists that cross beautiful rolling landscapes, but these may not be suitable for pedestrian travel as the road shoulders vary in size and quality.

The remainder of the trail travels old rail bed trails, urban trails, and natural trails. Rail bed trails that are restricted to pedestrians and cyclists use are in good condition. The grade is gradual, but access to surrounding land may be restricted due to fencing and/or steep embankments. Some areas permit ATV use and the trail, in these areas, may be more rutted.

There are some sections where the rail bed trails have been decommissioned by the municipalities. The TCT App does not represent some of these closures accurately. These areas will require some route finding, using local roads. The paved urban trails cross the communities throughout the province. They offer an occasion for resupply, some historic attractions, and the urban experience of Toronto.

The natural trails are generally in good condition ranging from gravelled surfaces to dirt tracks. The exception to this, is the Voyageur Trail west of Sudbury. This wilderness trail is seldom used, and very difficult to follow. There are markers and cairns to help with route-finding, but without these, one would get lost easily. When calculating distance travelled in a day, half your usual distance for this section.

Climate Spring is a rainy season in most parts of Ontario. Average daytime temperatures are about 8°Celsius in March and rise slowly through the rest of the season. The nights are cool. July and August can be very hot and humid. In southern Ontario, daytime temperatures are usually above 20°Celsius and frequently above 30°Celsius, especially considering the Humidex.

The weather gets cooler and the days get shorter in the fall. The early part of this season is rainy mainly near the Great Lakes. Further north, it may start snowing in October. In winter, the temperature in most of the province is often well below 0°Celsius, day and night.
